

ASH AND RIDLEY CHURCH NEWS MAY & JUNE 2026

Ash and Ridley welcome Bishop Jonathan

On Sunday 29th March - Palm Sunday - a combined congregation of folk from Ash and Ridley were delighted to welcome the Right Rev'd Jonathan Gibbs, Bishop of Rochester to preside and preach at our service of Holy Communion. The service was preceded by a procession from the end of the church path into and around the church to the hymn 'Make way, make way, for Christ the King in splendour arrives', accompanied by the waving of various bits of greenery.

Thanks to Martin Heath for these photographs taken on the day.

Alleluia! Christ is risen!

At 6.00 am on Easter Sunday morning, a small but intrepid group of parishioners gathered at the top of Ash Church tower, to greet the rising sun and take part in a short act of worship led by the Rev'd Scott Norwood-Witts.

RIDLEY CHURCH PCC

News From Ridley

Ridley held their APCM on 19th April after the morning service. Over 50% of the membership were in attendance; a good turnout. Thank you to all who attended.

At the vestry meeting Tricia Carr was re-elected as Warden for the coming year. Elizabeth thanked her for standing again. Thanks were then given to Alistair Davidson for his twelve years of service as Warden, a role from which he has stepped down, but he remains a representative for the Ridley parish at the Deanery synod. As such he will remain on the PCC as Deanery representative.

The meeting received reports from the Wardens, the Treasurer and the Deanery representative.

There was a brief report on safeguarding, where the most important part was that we are still looking for a safeguarding representative. Should you be interested in taking on this position please speak to Tricia.

After Christmas, Ian Paddy stepped down as PCC secretary. Our thanks to him for his years of service. Ian was well versed in the work of PCC secretary and has handed over to Ray Lewis. Ian has agreed to stay on the PCC for which we are grateful, as his years of experience will be invaluable.

Following the period of wet & windy weather, the sycamore tree at the NW corner of the Churchyard plot had to be felled as it was beginning to lean. This was carried out on 12th February and has created a much brighter landscape at the Church entrance and also for Ridley Court Farm.

If you would like to help us keep our 12th century church building in good repair, may we invite you to donate towards our operating costs by using the QR code below. Thank you for all your help!

Ash Church APCM 2026

On Sunday 26th April we held our Annual Parochial Church Meeting and Parish (Vestry) Meeting. The meeting was well attended by over 30 people, including on "Zoom", and was accompanied by welcome refreshments. The Parish Meeting was held first and Ian Nurdin was duly elected as the sole Churchwarden for another year. During the Church meeting reports were received and discussed, including the Financial Report and Churchwarden's report. Tim Orr & Sue Werlemann were elected to the PCC and Gillian Noakes & Cameron Clark were elected to the Deanery Synod, which also gives them membership of the PCC. Other reports were received and noted, a call for more help and volunteers especially keenly felt within our Choir and Saplings groups. As Interim Parish Safeguarding Officer, Ian stressed the need to carry out Safeguarding Training when requested, being a CoE requirement for certain voluntary roles.

A good discussion followed and in thanking everyone for taking on the training, Ian invited people to make their feelings known to the Safeguarding Team at the Diocese, as they needed to know that strength of feeling.

Diocesan Safeguarding Team contact details:

Mr Greg Barry: greg.barry@rochester.anglican.org

I would invite you please to contact Mr Barry with your concerns. If you would like to copy me (Ian Nurdin) in (BCC) then that would be helpful, but not essential if you would prefer to keep your views private. Any feedback received would also be most welcome.

And following on from our report on the APCM, here is a transcript of the sermon preached by Rev'd Dorothy McGarvey on that Sunday, in which she posed a number of questions for us to consider regarding our lives as Christians:

"When it comes to life, the Bible is clear that we can only be most fully alive when we are deeply and meaningfully connected with others. Although it can sometimes feel like the demands of others, the restriction of our freedom that comes from living with others, and the constant struggle to maintain strong relationships with others are too painful, exhausting and costly, the alternative, which is to isolate ourselves, is far worse.

As we continue to explore the meaning of Jesus' resurrection, the Lectionary leads us to consider what it means to follow the Good Shepherd, and to be part of God's "flock". It is not just that Jesus brings life to us as individuals, but that, through the resurrection, he gives life to our relationships and communities as well. And, when we welcome God's life into our lives, we are also welcoming God's family.

The writer of John's Gospel starkly depicts the difference between the callous legalism of the religious leaders and Jesus' compassion. Then, as Jesus draws on the well-known good shepherd metaphor of the prophets, he seems to mix his metaphors, referring to himself as both the shepherd and the gate through which the shepherd leads the sheep to pasture. There is a good reason for these two images. As the door, Jesus both protects the sheep from thieves and predators, and provides a way to shelter and food. The religious leaders, on the other hand, were keeping the sheep away from God's presence, and were leaving them vulnerable to the evil and oppressive forces of the world. As shepherd, Jesus was willing to give his life for the sheep and was concerned for their welfare. The religious leaders, however, were exploiting the sheep and were focused on their own wellbeing. To speak in this way was a dangerous thing for Jesus to do, but he was more concerned to challenge the evil systems of his day than to preserve his own life. Jesus' example raises some important considerations for us as we seek to follow him. As we interact with others - both our companions in the faith and those who are outside faith communities - we must choose how we will treat them. We can either act as gatekeepers who block their way to God's grace and love, or we can be doorways that make it easy for others to connect with God's life.

We can either be bad shepherds who are more concerned with religious excellence, or we can be good shepherds who put compassion and care for others before our own comfort and security. This is a tough call, but Jesus promises that when we follow him, he leads us to abundant life.

We may have become used to thinking of resurrection life as something we receive and enjoy mainly as individuals. However, through the interesting combination of metaphors - sheep and Shepherd, suffering and care, life and togetherness in the community of faith - we are drawn into recognising that the life Christ offers us is always shared. If we are to know the reality of the resurrection, we will discover it as we care for one another and share life in mutual compassion and protection. It is only together - in community - that Christ's life can be known and enjoyed.

If there is one gift that modern science has given us it is the realisation of the connectedness of all things in creation. It is impossible to do anything to another person or the environment that does not have some impact on ourselves. So, we are called, as followers of Christ, to embrace these connections, and to find in them the resurrection life that Christ promises. Like the psalmist, we can know God's care and provision for us, but also know that this means that we are drawn into God's house, where we are not the only inhabitants. Like the early believers we are called to share all things, to 'do life' together, and to endure whatever persecution or hardship we may face with the same grace and forgiveness that Christ demonstrated.

What this interconnectedness means, is that we can no longer ignore what happens on the other side of the world. We are connected with the poor, the sick, the refugee and the oppressed. And, in our own way, as followers of Christ, we can use our love and compassion to change the world so that the most vulnerable people are no longer exploited but are cared and provided for by those who truly seek their best, and who seek a better world in which all are secure, provided for and included in the community of humanity.

In our own communities what might this interconnectedness look like? In every church we inevitably fall into lines and divisions, splitting ourselves by gender, generation, theology and function. We tend to separate ourselves when we worship – children, adults and youth in different venues with different ‘styles’. But what if all these divisions rob us of life?

What if it is the very interconnectedness and diversity that opens us to the reality of the resurrection?

- In what ways can our church communities begin to identify and honour the connections, rather than the differences?
- In what ways can we intentionally begin to include those who are seen as different or ‘outside’?
- What would happen if our communities knew us as the church that connects people, that connects needs and solutions, and that celebrates humanity in all its God-given variation?
- In what ways could we offer a ministry of connectedness, welcome and involvement with those who most need to be cared for and offered life?

Do you think that, maybe, as we seek to follow Christ’s example, we might ignore the slights and criticisms that we so easily retaliate against, and notice those who need to be loved and led to life? And then, do you think that maybe our communities might find, individually and together, a richer, fuller life, as they honour and embrace the connectedness of the world?
