ECO CHURCH IDEAS FOR THE WINTER

Tin Can Bee Hotels – Fix an old tin to a fence or wall and pack it with dried hollow plant stems from 1mm to 12 mm in diameter to attract a range of bees.

Plant Tray Bird Bath – Fill an old plant pot tray with water to make a bird bath. Stand it on old bricks to raise it from the ground or leave it low to provide water for hedgehogs.

Old Sink Pond – An old baby bath makes an attractive mini container pond. Pile up logs or stones to make sure wildlife can get in and out safely.

Pallet Herb Garden – An upturned pallet can add height to your garden. You can paint it a nice colour and simply wedge in plants in their pots between the slats.

Grow Plants in Saucepans – Drill holes in old saucepans and other kitchen containers to make plant pots. They are perfect for salad crops such as lettuce and radish, plus herbs such as chives and parsley.

Restoring Choughs to Kent. – The plan is to release young Choughs each year and support these birds in establishing a self- sustaining wild population in Kent. This restoration will also benefit other species such as bats, birds, and some rare butterflies in these restored areas.

If you would like to help or donate to the Chough appeal and welcome these wonderful birds back into Kent which have been missing from our Kentish landscape for over 200 years – Please visit kentwildlifetrust.org.uk/choughappeal

Down Memory Lane

On 19th October our little group reunited for our third entertainment afternoon of poems, prose, songs and fun. We were grateful to our lovely audience for their enthusiasm and obvious enjoyment and for their donations to the church funds.

Jacky Richardson

The Legacy of Oliver Cromwell

There is an alabaster tablet on the wall in the chancel of Ash Church, on which are painted plaster effigies of Dr John Maxfield, the rector who died in 1605, and his wife. They are facing each other, with a prayer desk between them.

There is a similar wall-tablet set into the wall of Rochester Cathedral, dedicated to the memory of one William Seaton, who died 4 years later in 1609.

They look strikingly similar, but one difference between the two plaques is that, on the Rochester plaque, the heads of William and his wife Alice Seaton have been cut off at the neck. The decapitation of William and Alice Seaton was carried out on the orders of Oliver Cromwell, Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England from 1653 – 1658.

Cromwell was what was known in religious circles at the time, as an “Independent”.

Independents rejected any state role in church practice, and that included a rejection of the Church of England. Although they advocated freedom of religion for most non-catholics, they displayed a lack of tolerance in other areas, and their disapproval of the imagery and idolatry in the decoration of the cathedral resulted, amongst other things, in the defacing of the memorial to William and Alice Seaton. It is also said that, so strong was their disapproval of the role of the cathedral, as a symbol of the Church of England, that Cromwell’s army used the Nave to stable their horses.

We are fortunate indeed that the memorial to Dr and Mrs Maxfield did not suffer the same fate as that of William and Alice Seaton. But it reminds me that over the centuries since our wonderful Medieval churches were built, they have seen a lot of changes, and some of those changes have been more turbulent than others.

Cromwell, his Model Army and other followers, thought they were doing God’s will, in co-ordinating actions that led to the death of Charles I, and the creation of the Commonwealth. They thought they were the ones who were in the right, they believed God was on their side, they believed they were doing God’s will, and it was the groups on the opposing side of the argument who were in the wrong. As happens so many times in history, and still happens today, tensions had widened, the two sides became polarised. Nothing new in that, and sadly we see so much of that in our world today, most starkly and tragically illustrated by the conflicts in the Middle East and Ukraine.

Also as we see so often, it is folk who are just trying to live out their lives peacefully, without creating any fuss, including innocent women and children, who suffer, caught, literally, in the crossfire between deeply entrenched opinions on either side.

We are fortunate to be living in a time of peace in this part of the world, but the Second World War is still within living memory of some of our older residents, and I can recall my parents talking about their experiences of that war, and of my grandparents speaking about the impact on them of both the First and Second World Wars.

From what we hear and see on the news on a daily basis, it feels as if the world is in a very fragile state, with wars raging, and the risk of escalation. Signs of peace seem a long way off.

As autumn turns to winter in the days and weeks ahead, we need to pray fervently for tolerance, understanding, and peace in our world, and the coming of God’s Kingdom, where all people are treated with dignity and honour as His children, here on earth, as it is in heaven.

And may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be always with us. Amen

Hartley Players November Production

Office Suite

by Alan Bennett – two plays, full of wry humour:

Green Forms: Doris and Doreen are comfortably installed in an obscure department of a large organization. On a normal day they keep busy by flirting with nice Mr. Tidmarsh in Appointments or pursuing their feud over a plug with Mr. Cunliffe in Personnel. This is not a normal day. Someone has an eye on them and a shadow is falling across their tranquil lives.

A Visit From Miss Prothero: Mr. Dodsworth has recently retired. Sitting at home, he is contemplating his life and achievements with quiet satisfaction. There is a sharp ring at the door. His former secretary has come to ruin it all. Ironic wit and compassion mark this touchingly real story.
